NANCY, nahV se', the capital of the French department of Meurthe-et-Moselle, formerly the capital of the province of Lorraine, 220 miles east of Paris, on the railway to Strassburg. It is situated on the Meurthe River, six miles above its junction with the Moselle, and on the Eastern and Marne-Rhine canals. The first clash of the War of the Nations occurred on the Alsace-Lorraine frontier near Nancy, and the city was under bombardment a number of times in 1914 and 1915 (see WAR OF THE NATIONS).

Nancy's real importance dates from the fifteenth century, when Charles the Bold, one of the most powerful of the French vassals, was defeated by Rene II, Duke of Lorraine, and died at the city's gates. Nancy was the seat of the dukes of Lorraine until 1766, when it passed to the French, and it owes much of its architectural beauty to Stanislas Leszczynski, Duke of Lorraine and king of Poland, who made it one of the palatial cities of Europe. In 1814 and 1815 Nancy was occupied by the Allies who were fighting Napoleon; during the Franco-German War, in 1870, it was seized by the German forces, and compelled to pay a heavy ransom. The city is distinguished for its many imposing triumphal arches.

The Lorrainer plateau westward bring us close to Nancy, Domrémy and the Briey basin.

Saint Nicolas, patron saint of Lorraine has given his name to a market town near the ducal city.

It is between Saint Nicolas and Nancy that René II, together with the Swiss dispersed the army of Charles le Téméraire, January 5th 1477.

Esteemed friend/relative,

We received your esteemed letter and see from it that there are more Anstetts in America, but we don't believe that we are related ("in der Freundschaft" - among your relations). But nevertheless we were very happy to have heard from you. My name is Georg Anstett and my father too, and my father had only one brother and we are from Ingweiler. You can write to Germany now. They may know more. This letter left us in good health and in hopes that this arrives to you in good health. Also greet Fred. Redinger.

We greet you cordially,

Georg Anstett

(The above written in German, but he writes in the lower left hand corner in English - George Anstett has beautiful penmanship.)

Note: The above letter is in the possession of Mrs. Alice A. MacPherson, a descendant of George Anstett. George Anstett was born in 1800 and died February 7, 1879, age 77 years, 4 months, 17 days per his tombstone, County Line Cemetery, 2½ miles west of Ashley, Indiana (Steuben County).

The information below is from the research of Richard Anstett of Germany:

Georg (German spelling) Anstett was born on Oct. 31, 1800 in Ingweiler/Elsass/Lothringen. His parents were Georg Anstett and Elisabeth Weis, both were living in Ingweiler, Elsass/Lothringen. Georg Anstett married on Oct. 3rd 1826 with Susanna Staufer, born on June 27th, 1801 in the Markirchental at Barr, Elsass/Lothringen, was a daughter of St. Joseph Staufer (he was a cultivator) and Susanna Habertisch. Their son Karl (not Charles) was born on May 23rd, 1827 in Ingweiler. His father who was 27 years old was a tailor, lived in the house with the number 123. The daughter Salomea (not Sarah) was born on October 8th, 1830 in Ingweiler. The parents both had been 30 years old. After 1830 there aren't found any further registrations.

According to Civil-Status-Registers
Ingweiler can be found in Elsass/Lothringen, an area German language. Today, according to the French designation, it is called Ingwiller.

THE ABOVE IS CORRECTED AND SUPPLEMENTAL INFORMATION.

*Mrs. Richard White

One of mother's first cousins told her several years ago that when he entered the service during World War I, that his grandmother (Susan Anstett Ringler), daughter of George Anstett 1800-1879, told him that if he got over to France, to go to St. Nicholas, near Nancy, where the Anstetts came from, and see if he could find any of their relatives. This does not fit the above information, unless the family lived in St. Nicholas before moving to Ingweiler. In another year or so, I would like to proceed with research in and around St. Nicholas.

~~that can be found in the Ingweiler Civil Records.~~ This would probably mean that our Anstett line lived in Ingweiler for a limited period of time - probably less than 50 years. Perhaps before that the family was from St. Nicholas, near Nancy. In recent months I have spent nearly $90.00 on Anstett research in Germany - which exceeded my budget for Anstetts this year. At a later date, I would like to proceed with research in the St Nicholas area of France.

George and Susan Anstett were natives of France, living near the village of St. Nicholas which is located near the beautiful city of Nancy in the Province of Lorraine. The citizens of this locale spoke German, and it is reported that as late as 1948 many of the citizens were still speaking German. Some records show that Susan (Susanna) was born in Germany, while others show that she was born in France. Perhaps the confusion arose from the fact that she spoke German? The 1880 Census shows that Susanna Anstett was born in France and that both of her parents were born in France.

George and Susan with their little son Charles and daughter Sarah arrived in New York about the year 1833. Sarah's "to be" husband about 15 years later was on the same boat. His name was Frederick Lewis Falka, of Germany. It is said that the Anstett's were instrumental in Falka's being able to come to America; however, this future alliance with their little girl must have been the furthest thing from their minds.

George and Susan lived for awhile in Pennsylvania¹ and Ohio before moving to the town of Peru (Miami Co.), Indiana, where they are listed in the 1850 Census. The sons, Charles 23, George 16 and John 15 worked with their father who was a tailor by trade. The Indians living around them were very friendly during the day but could not be trusted at night. George and Susan decided they should move away and they came to Auburn (DeKalb Co.), Indiana in the early 1850s. It has been often told that at that time the Anstetts could stand on their porch and count all the houses in Auburn. By 1854 the Anstett's had left Auburn and on August 20th at a meeting held for the purpose of organizing a German Reformed congregation to be known as St. John's, George was elected elder. This church was near North Benton, now known as Hudson, Indiana. The 1860 Census lists George Anstett as a farmer in Fairfield Twp. (DeKalb C), Indiana. By 1870 he had retired from farming and was living in Salem Twp., Steuben Co., Indiana.

George and Susan had nine children:

On March 2, 1854 Charles Anstett married Sally Noll (Steuben Co., Ind. marriage records). On Sept. 9, 1854 Charles and his wife were at a meeting held for the purpose of organizing a German Reformed & Lutheran Union congregation $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles east of Salem Center (Salem Twp., Steuben Co, Ind.). This church was to be on the same circuit as St. Johns Reformed near North Benton (Hudson) that Charles' father, George Anstett had helped organize less than three weeks before, and although nearly 6 miles apart, the churches often supported each others activities. Salome was confirmed at St. John in Dec. 1856 and the following Dec. her first-born, John Lewis was baptized there. Records show that their other children were baptized at Trinity. The Trinity record shows that sometime between 1872 and 1874 the Charles Anstett family moved away. However, when Charles Anstett died in 1884, he was buried at Trinity adjoining the plot of his little son Edward who had preceded him in death. Did Charles make a venture out West, and his wife died there? She is not buried at Trinity, but their first-born John Lewis is buried on the other side of his father. John Lewis' wife is buried in the same cemetery beside her first husband, Peter Motsolf who met an early death from an injury sustained when kicked by a horse. Besides his wife, Peter left a 14 mo. old daughter, Alma. She was only about 4 yrs. old when her mother, Zora married John Lewis Anstett, who would've been the only father she could remember. FAMILY LORE OF FALKA-ANSTETT DESCENDANTS

"My grandfather, Frederick Lewis Falka was born in eastern Germany, March 1809. His brothers serving in the German army wished to spare him from such service, and through the 'Underground' made arrangements for him to come to America with the George Anstett family. They came to New York. In 1910 at the Anstett Reunion, Nellie Strawser told about the Anstetts taking up 40 acres in the burrough of New York. The Anstett's paid taxes on this ground for a time after leaving there, and today a big building stands on that ground. They got an attorney to look into the matter but nothing ever came of it. The Anstett's then came to Toledo, Ohio (I never heard about them being in Reading, Pa.), and then came to Ft. Wayne on a canal - the business was a tannery or connected with it in some way, and was between the old Fort and Spy Run; however, my grandfather took up as a bootmaker and came to Helmer, Indiana.

"My father's name was the reverse of his father's - Lewis Frederick Falka. He was born in Fremont, Ind. in a log house that stood where Lower's Garage now stands. My father spoke German and was 11 or 12 years old before he could speak English. His father died when he was only 14 years old and he went to live with the Benton Teeter's family, and he worked for them for 26 years.

"My father married Evelyn Lent from up in Michigan. Her mother had died when she was only 3 yrs. old. My parents had the Anstett Reunion at their place 3 miles east of Fremont, Ind. on Aug. 12, 1914. Mother had dropsy very bad at the time. She died in 1917. My father lived until 1947. My parents are buried in the Teeter's Cemetery (about 7 mi. east of Fremont)."

Related by Glenn Leighton Falka who spent most of his life in the family home east of Fremont. He now spends the winter months at Pine Grove Park, Route 1, Box 272, St. Cloud, Fla. 49769

"Grandma (Sarah Anstett) came from the French side of Alsace-Lorraine and met her husband on the boat coming over here. They landed in New York and came to Ft. Wayne. Grandma lived on 9th Street in Auburn. She spoke French and had a little dog that would lay at her feet. Grandma's first husband was "Falka" and it seems that one of them had a sister in New York City who was a dress-maker or designer and made lots of money. Grandpa was in Napoleon's army - close to Napoleon - his guard or something.

"Grandma's second husband was Sam Goodwin and they lived in Pleasant Lake, Indiana and are both buried there. Sam Goodwin served in the Civil War, and received a leg injury.

"My father, Peter Falka had 3 brothers and they all spelled their last names differently".

SARAH ANSTETT and FREDERICK FALKA were probably married in the early 1850s either in Peru or Ft. Wayne, Indiana. It is understood that Frederick worked in a tannery in Ft. Wayne with other family members. but after a time disassociated himself to become a bootmaker. Records show that in July 1854, George Anstett deeded Fred Falki 20 acres in Auburn, Indiana. Ties must have been rather strong there, because his widow was later to return there. However, in 1855 Frederick and Sarah were living in a log house in Fremont, Indiana. When their son Charles Peter was only 10 mo. old, the father died (1870). The oldest son, Lewis Frederick was 14 yrs. old and went to live with and work for the Benton Teeters family. The mother with the younger children apparently moved to her parent's home or near there, because in 1871 Charles Peter Falka was baptized at St. Johns. At the same time, the church record shows that a daughter of Sarah Falka was also baptized. Her name is recorded as Emma Jane Falka, born August 14, 1866. Is this Jane Susan? The name "Sarah Falka" appears in St. John's records through June 7, 1874, so it was probably soon after this that she moved to Auburn, Indiana, and then sometime later married Samuel Goodwin. Samuel and Susan later moved to Pleasant Lake, Indiana and there died.

Martha's back for 45th year

By DAVE KURTZ

Things are popping again at Martha's.

But there was a time last fall when it looked like Martha Falka's 45-year career as Auburn's popcorn lady was ended.

On Friday afternoon of the county fair, she tripped over a power cable that was snaked across the sidewalk at Ninth and Main streets. The result was a clean break of the bones in her knee.

Martha had surgery that night in a Fort Wayne hospital and only four days later, she was bending her injured knee in a way that made the doctors rub their eyes in disbelief.

A winter of recuperation was all Martha needed to be back in business for her 45th year. Some of her customers may have been concerned about her future, but Martha wasn't worried in the least.

"I couldn't wait to get here," she said Tuesday night, on her third day of the popcorn season. "I didn't think I'd be busy...and Lord, I didn't get the lights on until they were out there."

But business is slow on this warm spring night, and Martha has time to reminisce about 4½ decades of pleasing Auburn's palate.

Auburn's popcorn stand used to be on Seventh Street, between what is now Carbaugh Jewelers and what used to be Dr. J.H. Wilkinson's optometry office. Martha was employed in a restaurant next door.

"When I first bought it, I was working for George Bishop waiting tables — a sody jerk. Mrs. Wible wanted to sell it," Martha recalls of the popcorn place.

"I'll buy it," Martha volunteered in a conversation one day, but she wasn't very serious about the offer. Berniece Wible was. A few days later, she called Martha and asked to meet her at the bank the next day.

"I don't have any money," Martha protested.

"That's why I want to meet you at the bank," Mrs. Wible answered patiently.

But there was to be no bank loan for Martha — no money at all until Amos Adams of the local loan company heard about her plight. He offered Martha a loan of $500 to buy the business and the equipment.

Talk about your sound investments — she's still using most of that same equipment, except for the popcorn popper itself, a newfangled model she bought in 1953.

The big, whitewashed, wood and glass cabinet that contains the popper has a little more history to it.

"Lord, I've had it 45 years and Mrs. Wible was on the courthouse square at least 10 years," Martha exclaims when asked about the age of the case. "She must have had it 20 years. I bet that's close to 80-85 years old."

A large metal bowl and gas burner, where Martha's famous caramel corn is concocted, are over in one corner. Like the case, they're of indeterminate age. They came with the business, 45 years ago.

By these standards, Martha's stand, affectionately known as "Fort Martha" because of its surrounding picket fence, is practically brand new.

Martha moved to her little white building, and to Ninth Street, a quarter century ago when her Seventh Street landlord decided to expand his business and moved Martha out of the way.

Auburn's late-night snack source was in jeopardy, until a trio of white knights rode to Martha's rescue.

One of the heroes was Vern Buchanan, former publisher of The Evening Star and an Auburn institution in his own right.

"I thought I was going out of business, but Mr. Buchanan called me and said if I could find a building, I could set it here," Martha remembers.

Enter Fort Martha. "I bought it from Red Blickenstaff. It was a used car lot office," Martha explains.

Gerry Oren was Auburn's mayor, and one rainy Saturday morning he phoned to rouse Martha from her sleep at 5 a.m. He instructed her to get uptown on the double. "I came up and here set this building," she relates, using her hands to re-enact her amazement.

Hardly anything has changed since then, although the popcorn stand has a new decor for 1985.

"See what they did to my house? Carpeting!" Martha exclaims. "They washed all these walls down, my cupboards, put up new curtains...I call them the good fairies."

The good fairies are Mike and Mary Smaltz, Judy Shook and Barbara Drayna, who borrowed a key and slipped inside Martha's stand to do their good deeds last Sunday. Mike Smaltz toted buckets of water all the way from Auburn City Hall, a distance of 1½ blocks. Little Robert Drayna, age 3, told Martha, "I helped clean up the popcorn store."

Little Robert is the latest among generations of tots who have discovered that Martha's is a magical place.

"The kids have all been here with their dolls again," Martha says with a smile. "I don't know what I'd do without this place. The kids are all so cute when they come up here."

Sometimes she lets the boys and girls pass the popcorn through the little window and take the customers' money. Parents protest that Martha shouldn't let their children do that, but Martha shushes them. "They love to come in here, so I just let them come in," she tells the parents. "They're not gonna hurt nothing, so let 'em come in."

In fact, almost everyone is a kid to Martha, and the appeal of helping in her popcorn stand doesn't wear off with age. Two of Martha's newest helpers are in their 30s, Steve Post and Bob McClain, who stirred the gooey caramel corn for the first time this week.

Post tagged along with his neighbor and local attorney, Jeff Turner, who has been a regular helper with the task of lugging Martha's ingredients around, dumping them into the caramel corn vat and stirring the sticky mixture. Others who shared the cooking in recent years have been Sandy Condon, the Rev. George Schuette, Marty Alexander and Dr. Paul Trausch.

MARTHA'S BACK

"Doc's been the steady one. The rest of 'em filled in when Doc can't get here," Martha adds. She chuckles, "I can stir it, but Paul thinks I can't, so I just let him think so."

In truth, Martha looks healthy as ever in her cheery, redecorated surroundings. Yellow curtains with green and orange flecks add a splash of color to the building, but not like Martha's long, red fingernails. They pay good money for fingernails like those nowadays. In a Fort Wayne store last week, a cosmetics clerk insisted that Martha's were false. "No, those are mine," Martha retorted.

Martha's glasses hang from a chain around her neck, seldom used. Hanging behind the door, never used, is what Martha believes to be a fire extinguisher. It's shaped like an ice cream cone, with a yellow base and ball on top that resembles a scoop of double chocolate. "That came with the building," says Martha. "I don't even know how to use it." And it is probably too late, now.

But Martha does have a new refrigerator. It's in The Evening Star building, where she keeps all her supplies. Some things really do wear out, like the used refrigerator Martha bought in 1972 for a whopping $10, which lasted only 13 years.

Times have changed, too, because Martha has to use a key to get into the Star building. In the old days, "They never locked it at night. I don't think Mr. Buchanan ever had a key to the place," she remembers.

"I didn't want to move, but I'm glad I did," Martha says of her Ninth Street location.

The bugs aren't bad, yet, on this last night of April. The air is cool and fresh. In a few months it will be sweltering inside the little popcorn stand, but Martha will turn up the gas burners and make the city's favorite caramel corn and never complain.

Now the late night stillness is broken by footsteps that stop in front of the little, screened window. "I'll take a bag of popcorn, please," a man's voice says.

Martha explains that she has 35-cent bags and 60-cent bags. In 1940 the prices were 5, 10 and 15 cents.

She scoops the kernels into a brown paper sack. He doesn't want any butter. "Nice night," he remarks.

"Yeah, it's beautiful," Martha replies. And good to be back.

from Steuben Republican

ELIZABETH ANSTETT daughter of George and Susan (Stofer) Anstett See p. 2, 31
 b. 1838 Pa.
 m. Aug. 2, 1857 to PETER PARR per DeKalb Co., Ind. marriage records
 d. Before Apr. 21, 1859

If Elizabeth Anstett had lived to have children they would've been related on her side to Chauncey W. Ringler and on their father's side (Peter Parr) to Chauncey W. Ringler's wife Flora Parr. See p. 31. Chauncey Ringler's mother, Susan Anstett was Elizabeth Anstett's sister. Peter Parr was Flora Parr's grandfather George Parr's brother. The Parr's came from the New Philadelphia, Ohio area to DeKalb Co., Indiana. Over there in Ohio, Peter Parr and his 1st wife, Mary Lichty were members of Sharon Moravian Church. Mary Lichty Parr d. Mar. 8, 1857 and is buried in Fairfield Cemetery. On August 2, 1857 Peter Parr married 2nd Elizabeth Anstett, and on April 21, 1859 the same Peter Parr married 3rd Anna (Martz) Karl widow. This would indicate that Elizabeth Anstett died sometime between the last two marriage dates...a period of only about 20 months. Perhaps she too is buried at Fairfield. The 1870 Census finds Peter Parr living in Noble Co., Indiana and it does not appear that any of the children would be of Elizabeth Anstett.

Mae Addicks is the youngest daughter of the above Elizabeth Anstett's brother, George W. Anstett. Mae Addicks wrote on Mar. 8, 1968:

"My father had a sister that she and her husband went to some western state and she took the family Bible with her.....no one ever heard of that sister that came out west with the Bible except the Indians killed them."

The only sister that this could possibly be would be the above Elizabeth Anstett. If this were so, she and Peter Parr would've gone "out west" shortly after their marriage, and somehow Peter and his children by his first marriage escaped the massacre and returned to Indiana..

However, research at the present time would indicate that the Anstett girl that went "West" with her husband was more likely Mae Addicks' grandfather George Anstett's (1800-1879) sister. Perhaps she and her husband from the Reading, Pa. area on their way West stopped to see her brother George Anstett in Indiana, and perhaps George gave her the family Bible so that she would have something from home to take with her.
